

The Lift-accessed Backcountry of Saddle Peak

Submitted by Alex Marienthal on Mon, 12/24/2018 - 10:01

Saddle Peak sits south of Bridger Bowl as a pair of equally high points on the ridgeline. The familiar eastern slope rises 3,500 feet above the highway on the way to Bridger Bowl, and provides an iconic view to those at the ski area. The peak's extraordinary gullies and faces are the siren's song to the southwest Montana powder skier. Access to the summit is easy. Despite its attraction and ease of access, on any piece of the mountain, the consequences of an avalanche, wrong turn, or fall could be fatal.

SaddlePeak-OB.pdf

Publication

Outside Bozeman

Date of Publication

Saturday 12/1/18